If we really went to the moon in 1969, why haven't we been back since 1972? Think about it.

Ok so let me get this straight. In 1969 we had computers weaker than a Tamagotchi, suits held together with basically duct tape, and rockets designed by a literal former Nazi scien...

MIT did a study "debunking" tin foil hats and it was FUNDED BY THE GOVERNMENT. Do I need to draw you a picture?

Every time someone brings up tin foil hats, some redditor links the MIT study from 2005 like it's the final word on the matter. "AcTuAlLy TiN fOiL hAtS aMpLiFy SiGnAlS." Yeah. That...

AGI Hype

We are 18 months from AGI and nobody is acting like it. Why?

I have been reading every major paper that's come out in the last 6 months. I'm talking the o3 benchmarks, the Gemini 2.5 architecture leaks, the stuff DeepMind quietly dropped on ...

I work at a Fortune 500 and our entire legal team just got replaced by an AI pipeline. This is happening NOW.

Throwaway for obvious reasons. I'm a mid-level PM at a company you've definitely heard of. Fortune 200 actually. I won't say which one but we're in financial services. Last quarte...

Tech Humor

Google just mass-fired 12,000 people and then posted a job listing for a 'Chief Happiness Officer.' I am not making this up.

I genuinely thought this was satire when someone on my team Slacked it to me. Google lays off 12,000 people — via EMAIL, mind you, not even a call — and then the SAME WEEK posts a ...

I've been a software engineer for 20 years. The mass layoffs aren't about the economy. They're about shareholders finally realizing engineers aren't magic.

I started coding professionally in 2006. I've survived three recessions, two dot-com aftershocks, and the mass delusion that was the blockchain hiring spree of 2017. What's happeni...
